City Council To Continue On Gas Firm's Rate

An effort to pass on second reading an ordinance which would clear the way for higher gas rates in Circleville failed in city council's meeting Tuesday night when Councilmen Richard Penn and Ray Cook voted against suspension of the rules.

Ohio Fuel Gas Co. has asked the city to repeal an ordinance holding the rates unchanged for two more years and to substitute an increased scale to cover the next five years.

Company spokesman estimate the requested boost would raise the bills of home heating customers by about $12 a year and those of the lower bracket customers (cooking and refrigeration) by about half that much.

Company officials were present for the council session.

Councilman Ray Cook inquired as to how the increase would affect his bills since "they probably average about $2.50 or $3.50 a month."

FRANK PHILLIPS, district manager for the utility, replied that bills in such a range would be affected little or not at all for the first four years of the proposed five-year term of the new scale. Altogether, he estimated, Cook's bills would be raised only about two percent.

Phillips went on to repeat much of what he told council when the ordinance was first presented two weeks previous. He cited the nationwide increase in the cost of la-
