A HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Eighteen guests were entertained merrily, Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Maud Allen on West Main street, when the Misses Ina Allen, Berlia Oyer and Sylvia Stone were hostesses at one of the most fanciful masque parties of the Hallowe'en season.

The guests were greeted at the gate by Miss Oyer, who, dressed as a ghost, presented to them in greeting an icy rubber glove, and they were then directed by means of arrows on pumpkin faces to the garage, where Miss Allen reigned, as a hobgoblin dressed in black and orange, then on to the house where Miss Stone as a ghost further directed them through the house, after which they finally arrived in the living room.

Witches, black cats, and all sorts of weird decorations made the living room a place of trembling and quivering, and all sorts of unusual stunts, games and, contests were conducted in which Miss Glen Green and Miss Marjory Wisehart were successful in winning prizes.

Later, refreshments of sandwiches, doughnuts, pumpkin pie, with whipped cream, and cider were
