

SCHOOL MUSICIANS HEARD IN FESTIVAL

Ganne, the combined Fifth street and Mt. Logan orchestra, made up of boys and girls, most of whom have played two or three years, showed a marked improvement.

Tones Well Balanced

Excellent harmony and a balance in soft and light tones were apparent in the four numbers offered by the Boys' Glee Club. "Hush!", "Song of the Road", "Passing By" and "Two Crows" were included in their program, given by 25 boys.

In the varied program of intricate numbers given by the High School Orchestra, well-poised presentations were noted. Their numbers were "Poet and Peasant"; "Andante", "May Day Dance", and "Danube Waves".

Effective numbers were offered by the High School Band, appearing in military uniform and led by the drum major, George Ebenhack. "March Russe", "Japanese Sunset", "Bource", "Semper Fidelis", Sousa, and "Goldman Band", were included in the group.

Those taking part were:

"He did not know until later that she was—dead."
"Gladys was buried that night, and before she was put in her tomb James took a last farewell. No one knew when the tomb was closed that the ruby was in her dead, still hand. James must have suspected something then, about the stone. He must have known it—killed her."
