Shrine Horse Show Saturday Features Pony-Naming Event

Little Christy Ann Glendenning, 7 of Carroll, O., and her pony had been almost inseparable since the small steed was only a few weeks old.

The animal became too great a burden on the family, though, and after much discussion the Glendenning's decided to dispose of the pony at public auction.

While the Carroll family was worrying about finding a proper home for their gentle horse, the Pickaway Shrine Club had just the opposite problem on its hands.

Where could they find a pony that had been trained to love children to give as first prize in a "Name the Pony" contest at the Shriner's Charity Western Horse Show July 15.

RUSS Costlow and Col. James Ford were designated to find such an animal for the exhibition. By chance, they attended the same sale where the Glendenning's pony was being auctioned off and, without knowing the pony's background, bought it.

After the sale the Glendenning's and Shrine Club representatives met. The Shriners assured Christy that the pony would have a fitting home and would be cared for until the show.

Thus the Saturday Shriner's exhibit, sponsored in conjunction with the Aladdin Crippled Children's Program takes on additional human interest.

The show, to be staged Saturday night at Pickaway County Fairgrounds, will feature clowns, the Adelphi Community Band and an appearance by Miss Joy Trone recently crowned "Miss South Central Ohio."

A full horse show is slated with all classes of competition as normally provided in much larger exhibitions.

In the special "Name the Pony" contest, any boy or girl 15 or younger is eligible to enter a name for Christy's pony. The youth entering the best name will win the pony.

All proceeds will be given to the Shrine's crippled children's association to further treatment and research on crippling diseases.
